General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR)

The General Data Protection Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (GDPR) is a regulation in EU law on data protection and privacy for all individual citizens of the European Union (EU) and the European Economic Area (EEA). It aims primarily to give you control over your personal and special category data. There are lawful bases for using your data:

Consent basis:

This privacy notice is asking for your consent for von Lerse Ltd to process your personal (information that relates to the person) and special category (for example, ethnic origin, diagnosis, treatments etc.) data.

Contract basis:

Your personal and special category data is necessary to fulfil the contracted psychology services.

Legitimate interest basis:

We recognise the need to manage records and all other information following applicable legislation, protocols and guidelines. We are processing your data by keeping accurate, comprehensive and comprehensible records following applicable legislation, protocols and guidelines. As a provider of psychology services, we have a legitimate interest in processing personal and special category data.

Personal and special category data may be taken as records during sessions. Von Lerse Ltd will maintain such records in a format of its choice (print or digital/electronic). In compliance with liability insurance, records will be kept for a period of at least seven years after the last session. Printed data is securely locked and only accessible by von Lerse Ltd. Electronic data is password protected. The client can examine and copy these records and acknowledges that von Lerse Ltd has disclosed his/her record retention policy concerning documents, information and data acquired or shared during the term of the relationship.

The client can withdraw consent at any time. However, please note by refusing to give or withdrawing from consenting to processing your data, as described above, it may no longer be possible to provide the contracted services because this data is necessary for the performance of the contract basis.
